Feedback Control Theory

There are two types of feedback: positive feedback and negative feedback. As an example of negative feedback, the diagram might represent a cruise control system in a car, for example, that matches a target speed such as the speed limit. The controlled system is the car; its input includes the combined torque from the engine and from the changing slope of the road (the disturbance).

Feedback - Wikipedia

Control theory in control systems engineering is a subfield of mathematics that deals with the control of continuously operating dynamical systems in engineered processes and machines. The objective is to develop a control model for controlling such systems using a control action in an optimum manner without delay or overshoot and ensuring control stability.

Network management has become challenging, requiring automated mechanisms to detect traffic behaviour, which may affect the networks' availability and reliability. Thus, a traffic characterization, called digital signature of network segment using flow analysis, is accomplished. The models used for ...
